Notes:

- Finished size as written is 24 inches x 24 inches, but pattern can be followed to make any size desired.
- If you are limited to a certain yarn yardage, a helpful trick is to weigh your yarn before beginning and then work the increase rows until your yarn weighs a touch under half of the beginning weight (it's better to err on the side of just under half than over). Then start working the decreasing rows. For example, if the ball of yarn was 146 grams, work increasing rows until it weighs just under 73 grams, then start decreases.
- This corner to corner baby blanket is worked with little boxes of double crochet stitches; each box consists of 4 double crochets (a turning chain + 3 dc).
- The rows are counted on the diagonal with one box for Row 1, 2 boxes for Row 2, 3 boxes for Row 3, and so on, as you increase and then decreasing by 1 box for every row decreasing.
- If you are more of a visual learner, Blueprint has a step by step photo tutorial of the stitch used here that you may find helpful.
